CURVES AND SWERVES

If staring at the same four walls is getting a bit much, take the edge off things with this calming aesthetic. Think soft, undulating waves, gently rounded corners, and calming circular shapes in soothing pastel hues.

01 Better days are on the horizon, so remind yourself of that with this window into a peachy dream world. Helina Bassy's Boho Desert Landscape feels warm and peaceful – the only kind of art we need in our lives right now. www.helinaillustration.etsy.com

02 This beautifully crafted Oude Lamp is described as 'quietly opulent', which also feels like a life goal. Part of AAKS' Weaving for Change collection, creating employment for refugee artisans in Burkina Faso, buying it is an all-round win. www.aaksonline.com

03 Sometimes it's the little things that make a difference, like not eating dinner on your lap. Shop these handwoven raffia placemats and start a new weekend ritual, setting the table with care. Even takeaway'll feel fancy. www.ourlovelygoods.com

04 The Plump Vase is not only pleasing to say, it's pretty pleasing on the eye, too. Those rippling rolls of frosted glass had us hitting 'add to bag' the very second payday came around, and we highly recommend getting in on the action. www.thehappyblossoms.com

05 What is it about round cushions that's just so darn appealing? No offence to those squares out there, but an angle-free accessory always looks more inviting on the sofa, especially when it's clad in the softest velvet. www.noths.com

06 Shopping a whole new sofa seems like a bit of an indulgence, but one teeny weeny seat is acceptable. This La Folie Armchair is pure Moulin Rouge vibes – less for relaxing in, and more for draping yourself over. www.marieburgosdesigntheshop.com

07 Sculptural candles are so hot right now, and these Lex Pott twisted versions hit just the right note between subtle and statement. And with evenings in pretty much standard these days, your home deserves a glow up. www.kinhome.co
